getting cheeky

I think one of the worst aspects of aging is losing color (depth) in your skin. It causes you to look pale and washed out—definitely not what I think of as youthful. But looking younger can be as simple as the sweep of a bronzer and blush brush (thank goodness!). Using the correct bronzer and blush is the most effective way to create that youthful glow I keep talking about. For me, bronzer and blush always go together; neither is as effective without the other. Every woman can benefit from a little bronzer! You are not necessarily trying to look like you just got back from St. Tropez—you just want to give your face a little color. And every woman looks younger with a slight flush to her cheeks—like you had a really good night, last night (even if you didn't). The combination of these two products is what creates the glow. There are two key factors to your success: choosing the right shades and proper placement. Let's talk color choices first.
